

BAD EXAMPLE

Senior Joe Brown is an amazing football player. He is the best thing to ever happen to the team and we are very lucky to have him. Brown has the face of a movie star and body of a professional athlete. All the girls in the school are completely in love with him and burst into tears of joy when he walks down the hall.

The school should have a day dedicated to Joe Brown. I think the nation should also make his birthday a federal holiday. Joe Brown is an incredible athlete and a good person too.

BETTER EXAMPLE

Although it is early in the season, senior quarterback Joe Brown has already led the Blue Streaks to three victories. Head Coach Andrew Smith has watched Brown play since he was a freshman on the varsity team.

"We are very lucky to have Joe," Smith said. "He's been the best thing to happen to this team."

Smith is not the only one who is enthusiastic about Brown's performance. Senior Amanda Jones has plenty to say about the brown-haired, 6'3" athlete.

"Joe is the definition of perfection. Sometimes I spend hours crying over his yearbook picture, which I had blown up and have hung in my room," Jones said.

Not only does Brown spend hours each week at football practice, but he also finds time to tutor underclassmen in math and volunteer at a local food pantry.
